and others known and unknown were members and associates of a criminal organization engaged in murder, attempted murder, conspiracy to commit murder, extortion, money laundering, importation of controlled substances, and distribution of controlled substances and possession with the intent to distribute controlled substances. At all relevant times, this organization has operated in the Western District of Texas and elsewhere, and has been and is known as the Barrio Azteca(s) and will be referred to hereinafter in this Third Superseding indictment as the "Barrio Azteca" or "BA." The BA, including its leadership, membership, and associates constituted an "enterprise," as defined by Title 18, United States Code, Section

1961(4) (hereinafter “the enterprise”), that is to say, a group of individuals associated in fact. The enterprise was engaged in and its activities affected interstate and foreign commerce, and constituted an ongoing organization. The BA criminal enterprise is an illegal association in fact entity. The BA, also known as “Familia Azteca,” was formed in 1986 by inmates located primarily in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice (TDCJ) prison system. The purpose of the BA was to unite inmates that were native to the El Paso, Texas, and West Texas area. The original members of the BA created a charter or rules, also known as “sacred rules,” which set out a command structure, or hierarchy of ranks and their authority. These rules provide for a mechanism for promotion, demotion, and replacement of ranking members within the BA. The BA leadership ranks are the following: the Capo Mayor, Captains, Lieutenants, Sergeants, and Soldiers, also known as “indios.” It is the responsibility of the soldier to carry out the orders of the ranking membership. BA members refer to one another as “carnal.” A person wishing to join the BA is called a “prospecto” or “esquina.”

Purposes of the Enterprise

2. The purposes of the enterprise included the following:
 - a. Enriching the members and associates of the enterprise through, among other things, murder, assault, extortion, money laundering, and distribution of narcotics;
 - b. Preserving and protecting the power, territory, and profits of the enterprise through the use of intimidation, violence, threats of violence, assaults, and murder;
 - c. Promoting and enhancing the enterprise and its members’ and associates’ activities; and
 - d. Keeping victims and others in fear of the enterprise and in fear of its members and associates through violence and threats of violence.

3. The BA has expanded its sphere of influence to include the TDCJ, the Federal Bureau of Prisons (BOP), and various cities in West Texas and Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico. The BA has also entered into an alliance with the Vicente Carrillo-Fuentes drug trafficking organization (VCFDTO) in Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico. As part of this alliance, BA members import, export, and transport controlled substances, as well as conduct enforcement operations, for the VCFDTO. The VCFDTO in exchange pays the BA for these services, or provides the BA with controlled substances at discount prices. The BA has further subdivided its enterprise and developed geographical groups to better serve the criminal aims of the organization. These groups include, but are not limited to, the cities of Ciudad Juarez and Chihuahua City, Chihuahua, Mexico, and El Paso, Midland, and Odessa, Texas. Each of these geographical groups has some autonomy in deciding how it will achieve its criminal aims, but always within the framework and rules of the overarching BA criminal enterprise. The City of Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico, is further subdivided into different sectors that include: Benito Juarez, Chihuahua, Delicias, Aldama, Zaragoza, and Babicora. The city of El Paso, Texas, is also subdivided into different subsections similar to the political subdivisions in the city, such as: Central, Northeast, Eastside, Lower Valley, Horizon, Socorro, and Westside. The Westside of El Paso also consists of areas of New Mexico, from Sunland Park through Las Cruces.

4. In furtherance of the enterprise, BA members collect a street tax, also known as "cuota," "quota," "renta," or "taxes." The proceeds from the "cuota" are used to support members of the BA who are arrested, to pay for lawyers, bail bonds, fines, and any other fee associated with legal proceedings. The proceeds from the "cuota" are also used to purchase money orders, which are mailed through the United States Postal Service (USPS) to inmate accounts. The proceeds are also reinvested back into the BA enterprise activities for the purchase of assets, commodities, and other property that are related to the day-to-day function of the BA, including firearms, ammunition, and controlled substances.

Manner and Means of the Conspiracy

Rules

5. The original BA members developed a vocabulary, sacred rules, and chain of command. These rules direct BA members to be loyal, obey, protect, and serve the "family" as dictated by ranking members. New members are introduced to these rules by their "Padrinos," or individuals who serve as mentors for the new prospects entering the criminal enterprise. BA members are bound by a strict set of rules that ensure loyalty and participation in the enterprise's criminal activities. The rules require that a member must continue his participation in the organization after being released from prison. Membership is for life, and loyalty to the BA and its members take precedence over any other relationship. A violation of the BA rules or orders may result in harsh penalties, including death. An order to carry out a punishment involving assault or murder is commonly referred to as a "green light" or "X." A "calentada" is a less severe form of punishment involving some lesser form of assault. The strict rules and harsh discipline governing the BA help insure that members and associates will function as a continuing unit, despite any changes in leadership or membership.

6. It is a common practice for some, but not necessarily all, BA members to have BA tattoos. These tattoos commonly include the letters "B A" or "21" or the corresponding roman numeral "XXI," as a numerical representation of the letters "B" and "A." Other tattoos include the numbers "915," a reference to the El Paso, Texas, area code, and "El Paso Texas."

Many BA members also obtain tattoos representing aspects of the ancient Aztec culture, such as Aztec warriors, calendars, and temples, among others.

7. The BA rules provide that loyalty to the BA or "Familia" is paramount and superior to loyalties to God, country, family, or friends. All BA members are expected to know the rules of the BA and strictly abide by them. It is understood that BA members may be chosen to undertake a particular task, including murder and other criminal activity. The target of a particular order may be a fellow BA member, blood relative, friend, or other associate of the person who is given the order. Regardless of the intended victim, or possible consequences, an order must be carried out by the BA member chosen for the task. If the BA member does not carry out the task, typically referred to as a "jale" or job, he will be subject to disciplinary actions by the BA enterprise.

Communications

8. BA members who are incarcerated throughout the United States and Mexico continue to participate in the operations of the BA criminal enterprise from their prison cells by communicating through letters, telephone calls, and prison visits with other BA members and associates, friends, and family members. The BA leadership controls all BA members who are incarcerated in the United States and Mexico, as well as those BA members operating outside the prison system, which BA members and associates sometimes refer to as the "free world." The BA enterprise utilizes the USPS to send and receive letters between BA members who are in prison and those who are in the "free world." The BA membership mails its directives using U.S. and Mexican postal services. The letters written by BA members are written in English, Spanish, or a combination of the two languages. These letters are sometimes called "kites" or "whilas." BA members will often utilize an individual as a conduit to receive or send letters from another BA member or associate. These conduits are called "bridges." The conduits will sometimes use fictitious names and addresses ("bridge addresses") to send and receive letters and money orders to BA members who are incarcerated. The use of these conduits is intended to prevent law enforcement from finding out the identities or source of the true correspondents and the final destination of the letters.

9. BA members also use telephone communications to discuss BA enterprise affairs. BA members who are incarcerated coordinate telephone calls with BA members and associates to give out orders. The BA enterprise uses intrastate, interstate, and foreign telephone communication facilities to further the affairs of the BA enterprise.

10. Coded language is frequently utilized in written and oral BA communications, in order to mislead law enforcement as to the true message contained in the communication. The BA will also change the code or create transaction-specific codes to thwart law enforcement. Examples of BA coded language include "X'ed out" (former BA member), "green light" (authorization to assault or murder), and "tienda" (cousin paying associate). A BA member who has fallen out of favor might be referred to in the feminine tense or as an "X." The BA will also use pseudonyms or fictitious names and addresses in letters and during oral communications.

11. The BA holds meetings on a regular basis to discuss BA criminal enterprise business. These meetings typically call for the membership of a particular area or subdivision to attend. Some meetings will be attended by only key members. The frequency of these meetings is determined on an "as needed" basis. A meeting may be held to read and explain a letter from a captain giving the BA in the "free world" certain orders or directives.
